NOBODY.

A man and wife they fought one day,
I interfered in a friendly way,
Who said "don't have a thing to say?" Nobody.
The man he knocked off all my chin,
The woman kicked my ribs all in,
Who cried out "Shame! my what a sin?" Nobody.

When I fussed with Bill Jones 'bout Mame,
And I called Bill out of his name,
Who said I'd never look the same? My Grandma.
When Jackson threw a brick one day,
And my face it was in the way,
Who was it had the most to say? Dr. Smith.

Last fall when things were looking bright,
I started to whittle a stick one night,
Who cried out "Stop! that's dynamite?" Nobody.
When I in swimming went one day,
And on the banks my clothes did lay,
Who took my clothes far, far away? Somebody.

I donned a bathing suit one morn,
The only one I'd ever worn,
Who told me that the pants were torn? Nobody.
When I at one time wrote a play,
And played the play upon Broadway,
Who said go off and drive a dray? Alan Dale.

When I on ship for London bound,
Was many, many miles from ground,
Who helped me keep my dinner down? Nobody.
The time I had that foolish fit,
And struck a guy with this small mitt,
Who told me it was Hackenschmidt? Nobody.

When I was with my brother Claude,
And met a mule which kicked and pawd,
Who told me that her name was Maud? Nobody.
When I was slammed against a tree,
And Maud "Hee-hawed" with deviltry,
Who dug the horse-shoes out of me? Nobody.

When I fell off the Flat-iron block,
With force enough to stop my clock,
Who spread a net to stop the shock? Nobody.
When I was in that railroad wreck
And thought I'd cashed in my last check,
Who took the engine off my neck? Nobody.
